

Coding Nation is an educational web app built to help students learn programming. It aims to take advantage of game-immersion through modernized web capabilities in order to incentivize students to tackle coding missions to build, upgrade and expand their personalized city. A prototype should be testable in the fall to gather data throughout the semester for further research analysis and updates.

Martin Kadzis
Junior Year
Computer Science
Dr. Brian Eddy

